

Coffee was first consumed in the ninth century, when it was discovered in the highlands of Ethiopia. According to legend, an Arab goat herder named Khalid noticed that his goats became more lively after eating the berries of the coffee plant. Intrigued, he boiled the berries, thus producing the first coffee. The rest is history.

Would you like to...

Cruise on the Bosphorus River, hike in the Great Rift Valley, trek among Ethiopian tribes, explore the Byzantine Mosaics of Hagia Sophia, and chill in European coffee houses?

If so, apply now...

Prepare for the journey of a lifetime! Come by our office (see Janis Ragsdale) or visit our website for an application.

A $400 application fee is required with your application.

Harding University International Programs
Box 10838
Searcy, Arkansas 72149

501-279-4529

www.harding.edu/international

join us for a stimulating experience

summer 2010

Harding University International Programs Presents

A History of the World in One Cup

A study abroad program designed exclusively for students in the Honors College

What do Ethiopia, Istanbul, Rosebud, Paris and Starbucks

have in common? In a word... COFFEE

Discover the history of the world in one cup!

The exploration begins in May 2010 with a cup of coffee. Join the three-week odyssey with honors students and professors, Patrick Garner and Jeffrey Hopper, as we explore regions in Ethiopia, Oman, Istanbul, and European capital cities where the sale and consumption of coffee impacted the world forever.

The evolution and propagation of coffee traces its roots from ninth-century Africa to North America in the third millennium. To examine the history of coffee is to examine the effects of geography, climate, customs and religion on the development of nation states and international relations.

Traverse large sections of the Western hemisphere in search of the profound effects of a simple agricultural innovation on history.

Trace the coffee route where both specific and broad issues will be addressed. These wide-ranging issues will be connected to art, music, political geography, cross-cultural-nonverbal communication, and the effect of technological innovation on civilization.

Produced by the Honors College and the International Programs of Harding University

An invigorating peripatetic program filled with the aroma of... ADVENTURE

Professors and Directors

Patrick Garner, Ph.D.

Professor of Communication

Jeffrey T. Hopper, Ph.D.

Dean of the Honors College and International Programs

2010 Tentative Dates

May 8 – June 1

Credit may be earned (up to 8 hours) from the following:

HUM 201	HUM 273	COMO 261	COMO 101
POLS 202	ANTH 250	HNRS 203	HNRS 204

Costs

Application fee	$400
Tuition (eight hours)	$3,504
Tech fee	$176
Travel fee	$2,400
Room	$1,400
Board	$766
TOTAL COST	$8,646

