

DR. KEVIN YOUNGBLOOD

Dr. Kevin Youngblood currently serves as an associate professor in the College of Bible and Religion at Harding University, having served previously on the faculties of Freed-Hardeman University and Ohio Valley University. He and his wife Becky have three children: Karissa, Carmen (deceased), and Khyle.

Kevin has been involved in pulpit ministry for 22 years, serving churches in Tennessee, Pennsylvania, and Kentucky. His research and teaching interests center on biblical languages and biblical theology with an emphasis on Old Testament interpretation, especially the Old Testament in Greek translation (the Septuagint).

He has contributed articles to the New Illustrated Holman Bible Dictionary, as well as chapters for books on Lamentations and the Septuagint. He recently has been writing a commentary on the book of Jonah for Zondervan Publications.
